

Tried and Tested: Best of Mens skin care

Skin care for men has come a long way from the days when dabbing yourself with some Old Spice could have been considered metrosexual, had the term being invented already. Things have changed these days, and although there's always a guy at a stone's throw who feels emasculated at the mere mention of skin care for men, plenty these days know what they want. It's great to see how many good brands for men there are and how many now use organic products and support ethic standards too. Here are some of the best you can get your hands on.

Eyre BioBotanics Cehami After Shave Balm (£19) is rich in extract of Cehami - the native Australian plant also known as Centipeda Cunninghamii (or more commonly Old Man Weed), used for its anti-inflammatory and anti-bacterial properties, aloe vera, witch hazel and peppermint. Applied after shaving, it cools and soothes irritated skin whilst moisturising. The pump system dispenses the right amount of product, the balm is easy to absorb and has a rather lovely herbal scent that's not overpowering. Eyre only uses organic, biodynamic and wild harvest bio-botanics and is against animal testing. <http://www.eyrebiobotanics.com/>
